

Did you give birth early and do you live in London?

We need your help

Who are we looking for?

Volunteers who live in London and had a preterm baby (gave birth early - ideally between 22 to 34 weeks), and/or their partner/main supporter.

We're very interested to hear from black and south Asian families as studies show they are more likely to have a preterm baby, but we welcome people of all ethnicities.

When is the online session?

Monday 9th September 10-11:30am on Microsoft Teams.

How do I sign up?

Please click this link or scan the QR code below.

Alternatively, email h.davies-colley@nhs.net with your name and your partner/supporter's name if they are joining you.

What do we want your help with?

We are holding an online session to hear:

- What you think about preterm information currently given
- How hospitals should explain what to expect if you have a preterm baby
- If it would be helpful to have a video of neonatal units

Payment for taking part

Every volunteer will be offered a £45 voucher for taking part in the 90 minute online session and for looking at some information in advance that we will send by email - this will not take longer than 60 minutes.

Who are we?

We are from the three 'Health Innovation Networks' in London. We support maternity and neonatal units to improve outcomes for preterm babies.

Confidentiality

Your feedback will remain anonymous and will be used to shape how London hospitals design information being given to parents having a preterm baby.

Further sessions

Face to face sessions will also be held. If you would like to join one of these, please let us know when you fill in the form.
