Scotland in lockdown

Scottish Government

5 January 2021

The Scottish Government has announced that Mainland Scotland is to go into lockdown from midnight on 5 January 2021 with a new legal requirement forbidding anyone from leaving their home except for essential purposes. Amongst the limited reasonable excuses to leave your home are provisions for caring, outdoor exercise and to go to work, but only if that work cannot be done from home. In a statement to Parliament, the First Minister said a steep increase in coronavirus (COVID-19) infections and the intensity of pressure on the NHS have created a race between the virus and the vaccines now coming online. As a result, she said it was now imperative that everyone should comply with the message to "Stay at Home" for the duration of January.
